Unique in its field, exhaustive in scope, the Oxford Companion to Australian Literature offers a comprehensive account of Australian writing from European settlement in 1788 to the 1990s. It presents the most important achievements in the fields of fiction, poetry, and drama, and also covers non-fictional prose in journals, diaries, biographies, and autobiographies, and the impact of key historical events on Australian literature. Fully revised and updated, the second edition contains 500 new entries, bringing the total to 3050, reflects the greater influence and volume of women's and multicultural writing, and includes major new articles on crime fiction and the immigrant experience. Written in clear and accessible language, this major reference belongs on the shelf of every library and every lover of world literature.

Vol. for 1963 includes section Current Australian serials; a subject list.

Social Media Abyss plunges into the paradoxical condition of the new digital normal versus a life of emergency. There is a heightened, post-Snowden awareness; we know we are under surveillance as we click, share, rank and remix with a perverse indifference to technologies of capture and control and fear. Despite the incursion into privacy by companies like Facebook, Google and Amazon, social media use continues to be a daily habit with shrinking gadgets now an integral part of our busy lives, thrown between addiction anxiety and subliminal, obsessive use. Where does art, culture and commerce venture when the digital vanishes into the background? Geert Lovink strides into the frenzied media debate with Social Media Abyss - the fifth volume of his ongoing investigation into critical internet culture. He examines the symbiotic yet problematic relation between networks and social movements, and further develops the notion of organized networks. Lovink doesn't just submit to the empty soul of 24/7 communication but rather provides the reader with radical alternatives. Social Media is one of many Lovink's topics, along with the internet obsession of American writer Jonathan Lethbridge, the internet in Uganda, the aesthetics of Anonymous and an anatomy of the Bitcoin religion. How do digital monetization through cybercurrencies and crowdfunding contribute to a redistribution of wealth? Will they further widen the gap between rich and poor? In this age of the free, how a revenue model of digital media can be collectively designed? Welcome back to the Social Question.

1990: Includes U.S. and Canadian titles as well as foreign language titles with information on subject, frequency, and publisher name/address.

This inventory is produced from UNESCO's DARE Data Bank and is based on replies obtained from a widely distributed questionnaire. It provides details of the major social science information services available worldwide. The term "information service," as used here, applies to any body whose main function is to provide information or data to those working in the field of social sciences. The DARE data bank also exists on cd-rom (see UNESCO Databases).
