*Proceedings Of The Tenth European Meeting On Cybernetics And Systems
Research*

The emergence and widespread use of personal computers and network technologies have seen the development of interest in the use of computers to support cooperative work. This volume presents the proceedings of the tenth European conference on Computer Supported Cooperative Work (CSCW). This is a multidisciplinary area that embraces the development of new technologies grounded in actual cooperative practices. These proceedings contain a collection of papers addressing novel interaction technologies for CSCW systems, new models and architectures for groupware systems, studies of communication and coordination among mobile actors, studies of cooperative work in complex settings, studies of groupware systems in actual use in real-world settings, and theories and techniques to support the development of cooperative applications. The papers present emerging technologies alongside new methods and approaches to the development of this important class of applications.

This volume can be divided into two parts: a purely mathematical part with contributions on finance mathematics, interactions between geometry and physics and different areas of mathematics; another part on the popularization of mathematics and the situation of women in mathematics.

Human work has irrevocably become work with technology and the nature of work has changed to make the role of human cognition more important.

Modern society has come to depend on the safe and efficient functioning of a multitude of technological systems in areas as diverse as industrial production, transportation, communication, supply of energy, information, and materials, health and finance. ECCE-IO focuses On the practical issues of human interaction with technology in the context of work and in particular how human cognition affects, and is affected by work and working conditions. The main topic areas of ECCE-IO are accident investigations, applications engineering, automation design, classification schemes and taxonomies, decision making, design and use of tools and interfaces, modeling of cognition and joint systems, performance analysis and prediction, risk an reliability studies, simulation, system design, development and training.
